Automated Investigator Payment Management

Should you wait three months to get paid? We don't think so, either. Here's our solution.

Clinical research is demanding work, and if it's not accurate and delivered on time, it's not worth much. Every day you meet high performance standards — so why should you accept less when it comes to getting paid?

You shouldn't, but you probably do. A third of clinical trial study sites in North America typically wait 90 days or more for payment. Paying investigators is an overly complex and time-consuming process, but it doesn't have to be. We've got a better way, and it's available to CROs and sponsors right now.

Who wins? Everybody. PremierPay is an automated investigator payment service that ensures timely, accurate payments worldwide, in 140 currencies. Automation eliminates time-consuming manual processing and puts data in easy reach of everyone. It's intuitive and really easy to use, and available as a standalone service to any CRO and/or sponsor company.

You get paid faster, and your staff spends up to 40 percent less time on administration. With transparent data access, CROs and sponsors can better manage budgets and cash flow. And everyone can devote more time to life-changing research and improved patient outcomes.

Talk to your CROs and/or sponsors about moving trial payments to PremierPay. You'll do them — and your balance sheet — a big favor.
